When citing sources from the Internet, try adding as much of the following in the same sequence:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1. Contributor information</th>
<th>5. Publisher or sponsor of website</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2. Title of work (quotes)</td>
<td>6. Date of electronic publication</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Title of overall website (italicized)</td>
<td>7. Medium of publication (web)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Note that MLA7 does not require a URL. However, we encourage you to include it. Do so in angled brackets at the end of the citation

Sources Published Directly Online

Sources published directly online have no in print originals, and therefore, it is important to include online publication information (i.e. the website publisher/sponsor and date of electronic publication). If unavailable, for online only sources, MLA7 suggests writing “N.p, n.d.” which means no publisher and no date, respectively. We believe adding such place holders is unnecessary, as it provides no information, and the lack of information can be assumed by its absence in the citation.

Citing an article from an online only resource

Citing an entire website with no identifiable electronic publication date

Note that newspaper and magazines websites, that may even have in print copies, are considered non-periodical, directly published online sources. Follow the published directly online format.

Citing an article from an online only news source

Many times, the publisher’s name is the same as the online newspaper name.

Citing an article from an online newspaper

Some online only sources have publication information unique to its source type, such as online only journals (volume & issue information). Follow the journal format and add information on the date accessed.

Sources Published Indirectly Online

As opposed to some sources published by a website (direct), other sources may be originally in print, or in another medium, and found online. Cite these sources as you would in their original form, and then add as much relevant web information as possible (website title, publisher / sponsor, date of electronic publication, medium, and date accessed). However, because the source was not published by the website, you do not have to use the “N.p, n.d.” place holders if no website publisher or date of electronic publication is available.

Citing a book originally in print found online

Citing a newsletter found online with no page information

Citing a video found online

Citing a painting viewed online

Citing a musical recording listened to online, with no discernable manufacturer or date

Citing a digital image found on Google images

Note in the above example the title is not in quotes because it is a description of the digital image. The URL was truncated to the search URL because it was too long and complicated.

Sources found in online databases typically have been published elsewhere. Include as much as the original publication information as possible, and then add the database name, medium (web), and the date accessed.
